Illegal Wildlife Trade Manager

Location: Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Background

The WWF network is currently surging ahead with implementing its flagship “Closing down Asia’s elephant ivory markets” High Impact Initiative (aka, Ivory HII). This initiative places great emphasis on the Greater Mekong region, because the domestic ivory markets in China were closed on December 31, 2017 and consequently the trade and demand for ivory in the countries of the Greater Mekong region (Myanmar, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia, and Vietnam) has increased. The ivory trade is persisting in the Greater Mekong, either as a regulated market or as an illegal activity. The plan for WWF offices under the HII is to build an effective policy engagement capacity that persuades governments to close domestic ivory markets. Where illegal markets persist, support their closure through government law enforcement actions. The HII also focuses on reducing consumer demand for ivory, particularly coming from Chinese inbound travelers to the Greater Mekong region. This would create a two-pronged approach with the ultimate goal of closing ivory markets in the Greater Mekong region, including in Cambodia. Cambodia government has in effect banned ivory trade in July 2018, by amending its law and providing protection to both Asian and African elephants. So, what remains of ivory trade in Cambodia is illegal now and therefore, strengthening enforcement actions to close the trade will be the main priority.

Duties and Responsibilities

The IWT Programme Manager leads the efforts to combat IWT in Cambodia, including strategies to deal with wildlife crimes at source, curtailing wildlife trafficking, and demand reduction in Cambodia, with a particular focus on EPL. She/he also leads the implementation of the action plan developed under the WWF Ivory HII initiative for closing down ivory markets in Cambodia. This includes supporting training on ivory ban awareness and law enforcement operations for government agencies, supporting enforcement actions on traders, actions for enhancing prosecution of wildlife crimes, conducting ivory and IWT market surveys, and organizing demand reduction campaigns.

Job Description

Illegal Wildlife Trade Manager

Supervised by: Conservation Director, WWF-Cambodia

Work location: Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Duration: November 2019 to October 2020

Total Available budget:

1. Background of consultancy assignment/ project

The Greater Mekong region, including Cambodia, is a critical region for global illegal wildlife trade (IWT), being a source, a transit region, and a consumer base for IWT products.

Cambodia has been a pivotal area for IWT mostly attributed to its proximity to Vietnam and other countries known for accepting, channeling and facilitating IWT. In particular, the transboundary trade and demand for wild meat and other IWT products originating from Vietnam and some local Traders threaten numerous species in the WWF priority Easter Plains Landscape (EPL). Tiger Reintroduction is planned to take place in this area and the current drive is to shut down known and existing routes for Illegal Wildlife Trade through the area into Vietnam.

The WWF network is currently surging ahead with implementing its flagship “Closing down Asia’s elephant ivory markets” High Impact Initiative (aka, Ivory HII). This initiative places great emphasis on the Greater Mekong region, because the domestic ivory markets in China were closed on December 31, 2017 and consequently the trade and demand for ivory in the countries of the Greater Mekong region (Myanmar, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia, and Vietnam) has increased.
